Driving Questions

Who is using our site?

- What is the geographic distribution?
- What is the education level of the audience?

Why are they visiting?

– Can we identify different behaviors for different users?

Can we improve our collection's discoverability?

- What are the search keywords that lead people to the site?
- What content do users visit? Which resources are the most popular?
- What is the usage and growth of ELRC?

What's the impact of ELRC?

Are they learning STEM content and ideas?

Data Sources

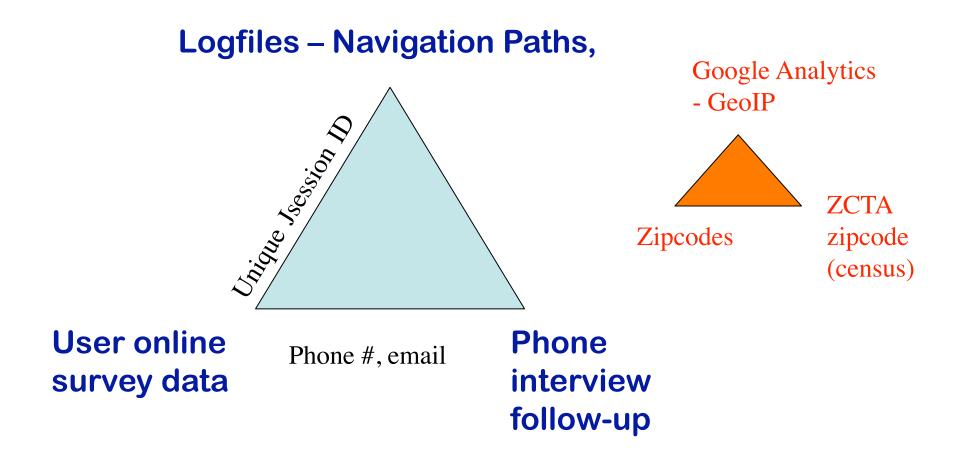

Web usage:

- Web server log since 2005
- Google Analytics (GA) since Nov 2007

Other:

- Zipcodes (2 years, 2005-2007)
- Online survey + zipcode (4 months, Fall 2009)
- Search term capture
- Navigation Paths
- Interviews (not yet)

What web traffic won't tell us

- Why don't they come?
- How effective were the digital resources in meeting the needs of the end user?
- Did the user learn any science?

What EDM might tell us...

- What types of users (educators) are there?
- What are they doing on our site?
- How are they using digital resources?
- How should a digital library be changed to improve user experience?

Next steps 2009-2010

- Applying EDM cluster analyses from IA to ELRC
- Doing the triangulation and data verification
- Conducting the interviews from online users
- More analyses of search behaviors and path analyses

Lessons Learned

- Data cleaning is laborious. Set up data cleaning head of time if possible before dumping into log files.
- Iterative refinement "keep tasting the batter" (or make sure you are collecting what you think you are collecting)
- Looking at online behaviors to infer learning
- We are doing research, not evaluation...however, try to identify effects and define impact of learning
- will be different for different stakeholders.
